FRIDAY, AUGUST 7, 1914

Primary elections next Tuesday.

There will be a lot of disappointed aspirants to public office next Tuesday night.

It will be well to keep informed on the progress of the war in Europe, but there is no use of getting unduly excited over it.

Unless all signs fail, Hon. John J. Whitacre will be nominated for governor at the democratic primaries next Tuesday. And he should be.

Word comes from all parts of the state that the friends and supporters of Congressman Whitacre feel certain that he will be nominated for governor at the primaries next Tuesday.

The race for the democratic nomination for United States senator seems to have narrowed down to Hon. John L. Zimmerman and Timothy Hogan. Mr. Zimmerman is a native of Mahoning county, is a man of fine ability, and naturally this section is strong for him. His friends confidently believe he will be nominated at the primaries next Tuesday.

Auditor W. C. Crooks of Columbiana county refused to get off the county ticket to be voted at the primaries next Tuesday so the republican central committee got together at Lisbon last Saturday and unanimously recommended Ralph W. Emmons of West township for the office. His name will have to be written upon the ticket by those who desire to vote for him, but the chances are he will defeat Crooks despite this handicap.

There is much interest just now being aroused among democrats over the candidacy of Governor Cox and Hon. J. J. Whitacre as candidates for the nomination of the party for governor. There is a very pronounced sentiment in Alliance for Congressman Whitacre and in an interview Saturday morning with several leading democrats the opinion was expressed that Mr. Whitacre would get a majority of the votes cast in the city at the primary election.—Alliance Review.

Ohio voters must pass upon four important questions at the general election in November. They are: whether women shall have the ballot, whether the state shall have a maximum of a 10 mill tax rate with classification of property, whether the Rose county local option law shall be repealed by a provision in the organic law and the state shall at the same time affirmatively say that it does not want prohibition, and finally, whether the state wishes to prohibit the "sale and manufacture for sale" of intoxicating liquors.

Only 29 arrests were made in this city during the month of July. Of this number 16 were for intoxication. Mrs. Frank Harroff on Saturday left for Cleveland to join her husband who has been employed in the Forest City for some time.

There are nearly 10,000 books in the Salem public library.

After all bills were paid the Chautauqua held last week left a surplus of $200.

There is now sufficient water in the city reservoir to protect the city in case of fire. Persons who have disregarded the order not to use water for sprinkling until additional water supply is secured will be prosecuted.

Some people in this city fear that if the proposed electric railroad from Youngstown through Canfield to Salem should be built that it will take business away from here so refuse to join in helping to secure the road.

County Board of Education met last Monday.

The first business session of the recently organized county board of education was held in Youngstown Monday at the board's office in the court house. Matters of considerable importance to the future educational work throughout the county were discussed.

A committee from the Perrytown school district in Berlin township and the North Benton school district in Smith township called upon the board. The schools in these places have been closed for failure to comply with the state law. The board took action referring the matter back to the local boards with a recommendation that the law be complied with and the schools continued.

The board voted to hold a county institute in 1915.

Mr. Baldwin was 89 years old. He was born on a farm in Boardman township and spent his entire lifetime in this section. Since 1858 he had been in the flour milling business here. He started his first mill when Youngstown was but a hamlet. He was one of the best known men in this part of the country. Mr. Baldwin was twice married. His first wife was Miss Susan Rush. She died in 1857. Mr. Baldwin married Miss Laura Newport Robbins in 1860. She died in 1907. Mr. Baldwin is survived by three sons, William R., Henry R., and Benjamin N. Baldwin; also two grandchildren, the daughters of William R. Baldwin. Mr. Baldwin was a recognized authority in the milling business. His years of activity had given him a knowledge of the making of flour not possessed by any other miller in this section of the country. He saw the milling business advance from its primitive stage to the present state of perfection, and for years he was sought by millers of the country who came for suggestions to aid them in their business. John P. Dillon, who for six years has been deputy clerk of courts, is a candidate for clerk at the Republican Primaries next Tuesday. The office of Clerk of Courts is one that requires a man of experience to properly conduct the business of the courts and Mr. Dillon's experience entitles him to the consideration of the Republican voters next Tuesday.

—Lisbon Patriot: Governor Cox's adherents are making a great howl and claiming that Congressman Whitacre would not vote for Governor Cox if he was renominated. They call Whitacre a bolter, etc. Will Governor Cox come out with the declaration that he will support Whitacre if the fighting congressman should win the democratic nomination? No one thinks for a minute that Cox would vote for him. The only difference is that Whitacre comes out and says what he thinks and Cox plays politics.

—The connection between feeding and literary genius is commented on by Robert Sherard in his Modern Paris. Zoia, he says, wrote best when he was very stout, and that when his bulk dwindled so did his talent. Theophile Gautier, himself enormous, maintained that a man of genius should be fat, and for proof pointed to "that more barrel than man," Balzac; to Alexander Dumas, "always fat and jolly"; to "the hippopotamus in breeches," Rossini, and to the plump and well-fed appearance of Victor Hugo and Sainte-Beuve.

Byron would never have agreed with Theophile Gautier's dictum that men of genius should be fat. For the increase of his too, too solid flesh was the one thing of which he was afraid, and various freak diets were adopted to keep it under. "Don Juan" was written almost entirely on gin and water, and in 1813 he lived on six biscuits a day and tea. Previously at Athens he had tried a diet of rice in small quantities, washed down by vinegar and water and later on he tried one thin slice of bread for breakfast and a vegetable dinner, keeping down hunger by chewing tobacco. And apparently such diets stimulated the brain while mortifying the flesh.

He—Those are signals to the catcher.
